TO PETER GUBER

I have confirmed several times with Joe DiMuro, as recently as yesterday, that he sees no particular problem with our use of the King Kong character in a special effect at Florida or at Universal City.

I had advised Joe that in our contract with the designer we specified that the King Kong character is not to be modeled after the ones used in either of the two motion pictures, but rather is to be based upon generic apes or an ape from a zoo or from wild life.

Joe felt that we would have these rights from our ownership of the book, "King Kong", and if that book is in public domain (as we had previously successfully asserted), then the rights themselves would be in public domain.

Joe asked that we keep him informed as this progresses, and I assured him that we would.
